

There are many lessons to be learned by survivors and would-be helpers following a disaster. A teenage Indonesian girl, Anggun Wahyun Kusumawati, shares her reflections after surviving the 2004 South Asia tsunami:

*There's an echo in my ears;
A thousand tears
A thousand screams
A thousand plaintive cries
From all that was innocent.*

*There's an image in my eyes;
A thousand reaching hands
A thousand tear drops
From all that was innocent.*

*There's a dream in my sleep;
A thousand dead bodies
From all that was innocent.*

*It seems the earth is broken in two
By you tsunami
But I'm sure it's not the end of life
Rather, this is a warning against human neglect.*

So please remember this for all time.

For our sins we beg for forgiveness from our Creator.
